IT'S OFFICIAL

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi on Tuesday announced a formal impeachment inquiry by Congress into President Trump, who is accused of trying to enlist a foreign power to get dirt on political rival Joe Biden. 2

THINGS
KNOW

Official probe will explore whether president violated U.S. Constitution.

The U.S. House of Representatives will launch a formal impeachment inquiry into President Donald Trump over reports he sought foreign help to smear a political rival, setting up a dramatic clash between Congress and the White House that has spilled into the 2020 presidential campaign.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi announced the inquiry on Tuesday after a closed-door meeting with Democratic lawmakers, saying Trump's actions appeared to have undermined national security and violated the U.S. Constitution.

"The president must be held accountable. No one is above the law," said Pelosi, who for months had been reluctant to embrace an impeachment effort.

Trump fired back quickly on Twitter, calling the inquiry "Witch Hunt garbage."

Pelosi's change of heart followed reports that Trump had pressured Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky in a July 25 phone call to investigate Democratic presidential front-runner Joe Biden and his son Hunter, who had worked for a company drilling for gas in Ukraine.

Trump promised on Tuesday to release a transcript of his phone call. He has acknowledged he discussed Biden in the call, but denied he withheld nearly $400 million in U.S. aid to Ukraine as leverage to get Zelensky to launch a probe that would damage Biden, who leads opinion polls in the Democratic race to face Trump in the November 2020 election.

Pelosi said the six congressional committees currently investigating

Trump would continue with their probes as part of the inquiry. Those panels would work collaboratively, and then decide whether the House Judiciary Committee should draft articles of impeachment, House aides said.

"The actions of the Trump presidency revealed a dishonorable fact of the president's betrayal of his oath of office, betrayal of our national security and betrayal of the integrity of our elections," Pelosi said.

Congressional allies of Trump said Pelosi was playing politics with the decision. Republican Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell called it "a rush to judgment" and said it should have waited until after details of the phone call were revealed.

"It simply confirms that House Democrats' priority is not making life better for the American people, but their nearly three-year-old fixation on impeachment," he said in a statement.

The impeachment inquiry could eventually lead to Trump's removal from office, although that would be a steep task for Democrats. Even if the Democratic-controlled House voted to impeach Trump, the Republican-majority Senate would have to take the next step of removing him from office after a trial. A conviction would require a two-thirds Senate majority.

It will be the first impeachment inquiry in Congress since the 1998 probe of President Bill Clinton for perjury and obstruction of justice in relation to his affair with White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

The House voted to impeach Clinton in December 1998, but the Democratic president was acquitted two months later by the Senate and remained in office. The only other president to be impeached, Andrew Johnson in 1868, was also acquitted by the Senate.

Biden said he would back impeachment if the president did not fully comply with congressional investigations.

"If we allow a president to get away with shredding the Constitution, that will last forever," Biden told reporters in Wilmington, in his home state of Delaware.

Marijuana delivery, social consumption rules set by CCC

2 The state Cannabis Control Commission on Tuesday approved its latest regulations for the medical marijuana world as well as the adult-use or recreational industry and addressed one of the more controversial parts of the new rules — the requirement that people delivering marijuana record the transactions on body cameras and retain that footage — with compromise language. The requirement that drivers wear a body camera any time they are outside their delivery vehicle — which is also required to have cameras — and record all transactions caught significant flak at public hearings this summer and commissioners have wrestled to find a balance between public safety and individual privacy rights. "We depend on a good relationship with law enforcement. Our regulations reflect this," Commissioner Britte McBride said Tuesday.

WeWork CEO Neumann resigns after investor revolt

3 WeWork co-founder Adam Neumann agreed on Tuesday to resign as chief executive and give up majority voting control, after SoftBank Group Corp. and other shareholders turned on him over a plunge in the U.S. office-sharing start-up's estimated valuation. The decision came after We Work parent We Company postponed its initial public offering last week following push-back from perspective stock market investors, not just over its widening losses, but also over Neumann's unusually firm grip on the company. This was a blow for SoftBank, which was hoping for We Company's IPO to bolster its fortunes as it seeks to woo investors for its second $108 billion Vision Fund. SoftBank invested in We Company at a $47 billion valuation in January. But investor skepticism led to it earlier this month considering a potential IPO valuation of as low as $10 billion, Reuters reported. REUTERS

Netflix set for worst quarter since 2012 amid competition

4 Shares of Netflix dropped nearly 4 percent on Tuesday and were on track for their deepest quarterly decline in seven years after analysts added to growing worries about an impending wave of competition from Walt Disney and other rivals. Netflix has lost 30 percent since the end of June, and if that decline holds until Monday, it will have been the worst quarterly performance for the video streaming heavyweight's shares since 2012. Upcoming streaming services from Disney and Apple have added to worries about Netflix's slowing subscriber growth and rising costs as it increases spending to create top-tier series like "Stranger Things" and "The Crown." Viewed as the most dangerous threat to Netflix, Disney+ is set to launch on Nov. 12, with a slate of new and classic TV shows and movies from some of the world's most popular franchises. REUTERS

Baker declares 4-month sales ban on vaping products

Governor declares public health emergency amid reports of lung disease nationwide.

Gov. Charlie Baker on Tuesday announced a four-month ban on the sale of all vaping products in Massachusetts. Baker made the announcement at a press conference where he said he was declaring a public health emergency in connection with vaping-related lung illnesses. Hundreds of cases of the illness have been reported nationwide and Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel has already ordered all cases to be reported to the Department of Public Health for the next year.

"We as a commonwealth need to pause sales in order for our medical experts to collect more information about what is driving these life-threatening vaping-related illnesses," Baker said.

The temporary ban will apply to flavored and non-flavored vaping products, Baker said, in retail stores and online. The ban applies to all vaping products and devices, including tobacco and marijuana. It takes effect immediately, with the Public Health Council having planned to approve an order later on Tuesday.

During a radio interview earlier Tuesday, Senate President Karen Spilka said, "This is a public health crisis."

Trump administration officials earlier this month announced plans to remove flavored e-cigarette products from the market.

The truth about pumpkin spice season

Fall is best known as the season of pumpkin spice and apples, but which holds the coveted spot of favorite fall flavor? Grubhub investigated the truth about which flavors reign supreme during autumn.

It should come as no surprise that pumpkin spice topped their list as the most sought-after fall flavor, followed closely by caramel apple. Other favorite flavors of autumn include apple cinnamon, pear and maple.

The most coveted pumpkin-flavored item is perhaps the pumpkin spice latte. Every year, pumpkin spice latte (PSL) seasons get pushed forward — this year, Dunkin' released its PSL on Aug. 21 and Starbucks released theirs on Aug. 27. Despite August becoming the starting month for the fan favorite, August isn't really when people are opting for that flavor.

Although PSLs returned in August, the Grubhub study shows that the height of pumpkin spice, or the overall pumpkin-flavored craze, is actually October. It was reported that in October, there were 118 percent more orders on pumpkin items, followed by November. November has 92 percent more pumpkin- and pumpkin spice-flavored items.

The fascination with pumpkin-flavored items goes beyond festive drinks, with the flavor being popular in other dishes, although this study shows that they are most popular in breakfast and dessert dishes.

Topping the list for most popular pumpkin dish is the pumpkin spice pancake. The pumpkin spice pancake is followed by pumpkin pie milkshake, pumpkin spice cheesecake, pumpkin cupcake, and pumpkin spice cookies.

Although the East Coast loves pumpkin-flavored items, the study shows that the West Coast's passion tops the list for locations with the most ordered pumpkin items. California tops the list as the state with the most pumpkin orders. Oregon, Washington, Ohio and Utah round out the top five.

As much as we love pumpkin or pumpkin spice-flavored goodies, we cannot survive on pumpkin or pumpkin spice-flavored items alone. So in addition, Grubhub predicted the fall's other top food trends:

1. Pesto pasta
2. Fried okra
3. Lemongrass soup

Don't stop now: A conversation with Robert Pollard of Guided by Voices

Metro talks with the songwriter and creative force behind the influential indie-rock band.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Robert Pollard has always created art like it's batting practice. Once the inspiration and his muse presents itself, it can either be launched into staggering heights or connect briefly with little impact. But the ethos for Pollard is to keep swinging, no matter what. For nearly 40 years as a songwriter and sole member of the beloved indie rock band Guided by Voices, he has willed songs, albums and visual art into existence at an alarming rate. Later next month, his newly re-energized lineup will release their third proper album of the year, "Sweating the Plague," which is a prime crystallization of the three P's that Pollard looks for in crafting a collection of songs: a healthy dose of Punk, Prog and Pop. I caught up with the Dayton, Ohio, legend ahead of the band's show in New York.

The band is on an incredible hot streak with three amazing records this year — "Zeppelin Over China," "Warp and Woof," and now "Sweating the Plague." What have been some of your favorite moments on these records? The entire process is a blast, from writing the songs up to the wrap-up in production. The chemistry with everyone involved has gotten very refined. We've gotten to know one another very well.

It's been 15 years since the "final" Guided by Voices album, "Half Smiles of the Decomposed," which was recently reissued by Matador. Looking back at that record, how have you seen yourself change or progress as a songwriter and as an artist?

Well, one always hopes to see continuous improvement. I always say the new one is the best of all, and I mean it at the time. I've made 107 albums and I think they keep getting better. I think you have to have that attitude or what's the point? "Half Smiles" is great but I seriously don't think it's as good as what we're doing now. The company I've been keeping is a major factor in that regard.

Since reforming Guided by Voices, you have basically had to start from the ground up, starting with the "classic lineup" and making gradual changes in order to get to this current lineup — which is fantastic. When do you know if your supporting band is fit to be labeled GBV or if it is getting in the way of your vision? If I sense a lack of enthusiasm for either playing live or making a record. I know I have a problem. I can tell if someone is half-fassing it in both of those areas. You don't disrespect the stage or the songs. That may sound a little tyrannical, but that's the way it is. You've got to show a great sense of pride in what you're doing, or go do something else.

Both your output with this current lineup and the live shows have been absolutely astonishing. Many people call this a new "golden age" for the band and your songwriting. Can you feel that now and does that excite you to create?

I definitely feel everyone in the band, including our producer-engineer Travis Harrison, is very cooperative and very excited about pumping out as many records as I want to make. They're plugged in and come up with great ideas. We just finished next year's first album, and they're already working on the one after that. Also, it's great to see a lot of young people at our shows. There seems to be a new generation of Guided by Voices fans. I'm sure their parents turned them on.

You'll be capping off the year with a 100-song performance in L.A. That's only 40 or 50 more songs than you'd usually play! What is the story behind doing such a marathon performance?

My doctor said he dreamt it, that we played 100 songs for $100. He even handed it to me written out on a prescription pad. So I figured, he's my doctor so we gotta do it.

You have always favored playing a good amount of new material live and never giving fans a "festival set." What are your views on the word "legacy"? Is it detrimental for artists to rest their laurels on past achievements?

I don't see how they can even entertain resting on their laurels and claim that they enjoy making music. I mean, you can always pull out what you did in the past and look at it with a sense of pride or embarrassment, but you have to keep it moving. It's just what you should do.

One part of seeing Guided by Voices that goes completely above and beyond the price of admission is seeing your hilarious stage banter. Has there ever been a time where you found yourself in too much hot water after joking around onstage? Have those tangents ever influenced you to write a song after a gig? Yeah, I've put my foot in my mouth many times. I've had people scream at me to shut up and just sing. One guy did that on the house engineer's microphone and I told the crowd to, on the count of three, scream "F—k you" to him. He never tried that again. Have you ever had a thousand people scream, "F—k you, Pat King!"? But he was probably right because I was talking s—t about a guy who was in attendance, totally unbeknownst to me.

In Matthew Cutter's book, "Closer You Are," there are moments where it seemed like spite and the overall feeling of "Just wait, I'll show you..." were prime motivators in your creative output. Is that feeling of proving your doubters wrong still a big source of inspiration?

No, I've already done that. I'm well-respected now as an artist and songwriter, and people know well that it's difficult to shut me up. Also, we have our own label and merchandise company. Our own world. We've targeted our audience and we know who they are.

Part of the larger narrative around your career is how you were working as a teacher and well into your 30s when the band started to take off. It's a true testament to the belief that doing the work as an artist is the most important part of the whole thing. Do you still find that to be true and what advice do you have for those out there who are banging their heads against the wall with nothing to show for it? Do the work as an artist and keep banging your head against the wall with nothing to show for it.

Rebirth Garments: The celebration of being unique

This brand — through design and exuberance — covers a need no market has ever managed to meet.

LUZ LANCHEROS,
MWN
lancheros@metro.us

While the fashion industry makes many people dream about dazzling runway conceptions, in reality, everything that is dissected or sold in various consumer sectors does not reach many people who are looking for something more than common clothing.

The plus-size market is a clear example with its design gap. But in the case of queer, trans and disabled people, the problem is even more evident. There are no designs that make people feel unique, special and reaffirm their identity.

That is why Sky Scubacub, nonbinary and disabled person of Filipino origin, thought of a piece that not only helped him in his transition, but was accessible to those who had these processes with their identity.

Why did you decide to create Rebirth Garments?

I have had a life-long panic disorder which shapes my art, organizing work, the people with whom I surround myself, and the community I foster. I started my clothing line shortly after my chronic stomach disorder began in college. During this time, the waistband of traditional pants would cause me significant discomfort, aggravating my stomach condition. I make myself stretchy pants with soft waistbands that accommodate my stomach pain and seams on the outside for my sensory sensitivities.

I dreamt of making gender-affirming garments when I was in high school and couldn't access a chest binder. A chest binder is a garment used to flatten the chest, typically used by transmasculine people. Accessibility to gender-affirming clothing is severely limited for those without a credit card to shop online or an ID that will allow them into the adult spaces where such clothing is typically located. Even when I could access binders, I was disappointed by their medicalized appearance and feel. I decided to serve both needs in order to make an intersectional clothing line unlike any other.

How have you created the concept of the pieces?

Clients are asked what would make clothing more accessible to them, what would make clothing more gender-affirming, and what they want to highlight. Every garment is handmade, custom-designed to the client's measurements, accessibility needs and aesthetic preferences.

Rebirth Garments' clients are people whose functional and fashion needs are not adequately met by mainstream clothing. The majority of my customers are disabled people (including apparent/non-apparent disabilities), people with sensory sensitivities, transgender/nonbinary people and fat/plus-sized people. Most clients have a functional need, such as cisgender women who have very large cup sizes and cannot find bras that are comfortable and affordable. Similarly, many of my transmasculine clients need a binder (compression garment that reduces the appearance of breasts) but have physical disabilities that prevent them from being able to wear a non-custom binder. Garments can be made with the seams on the outside for people with sensory sensitivities, or pockets to hold gender-affirming prosthetics or insulin pumps.

What do you think about inclusion in the fashion industry? Rebirth is creating a space that is unique from designers in fashion history. We create not only physical garments, but physical spaces that are inclusive. We consider it in ALL aspects of our design process from the people we hire, our models, our media and overall philosophy. While other designers frequently consider one aspect of diversity/inclusion, we consider multiple intersections of identity.

Facts about GalaXsea:

- The project name comes from the mix of "Galaxy" and "Sea" — thus the design is made in the form of a sailboat.
- The solar sailboat would be manufactured with a 3-D space printer, which would extract the construction materials from an asteroid.

- According to the plan, the spaceship would have a capacity for up to 15,000 people.

Ex-Browns Collins and Gordon thriving with Patriots.

MATT BURKE
mattburke@metro.us

Two years ago, Patriots linebacker Jamie Collins and Pats wide receiver Josh Gordon were both in football purgatory as members of the 0-16 Cleveland Browns.

Today, they're two of the most important pieces of the team that is heavy favorites to repeat as Super Bowl champions.

Collins and Gordon were making plays all over the field in the Patriots' dominant win over the Jets on Sunday as Collins posted seven tackles, had two sacks, and three tackles for loss, while Gordon recorded six catches for 83 yards.

Collins, who was released by the Browns on March 6 and re-signed with the Pats on May 15, has been a revelation this season for the Patriots' top-ranked defense.

experienced guys out there who are smart and their instincts are great. It's all 11 guys, it's not just one or two of us. That's what makes this so special and hopefully we can continue doing what we're doing and keep ballin'."

showing maturity as he continues to take things day by day with his substance abuse issues. In addition to the strong performance this past Sunday, Gordon also shined in the Week 1 win over Pittsburgh as he hauled in 73 yards of receiving while also posting a

"I've just always tried to have the mindset of not leaving anything undone. I give everything my best if I can do so. Physically, I've just always been a fighter that's going to fight back."

BC must continue to feature bruising offense

VSIN

Boston College (-8) bounced back big this past weekend with a 30-16 win on the road at Rutgers. While not exactly erasing the memory of the prior week's debacle vs. Kansas, it helped reset the season heading into six straight meetings vs. Atlantic Coast Conference opponents.

The Eagles are now 3-1 straight up (2-2 against the point spread), only needing three more victories to become bowl eligible.

Saturday's two-touchdown victory was a reminder of Boston College's strengths.

"BC moved the ball efficiently, converting 47 percent of its third down tries (compared to just 27 percent for Rutgers) and finishing off very long touchdown drives of 79, 82, and 75 yards (as well as a short 12-yard gift).

"BC didn't turn the ball over once despite running 87 offensive plays. Rutgers had two giveaways on just 60 plays.

"BC owned the point of attack, winning rushing yardage 272-76. Star running back A.J. Dillon was a true workhorse, totaling 150 yards on the ground with a maximum run of just 15 yards.

This bruising offense loves to march the ball downfield into the end zone. As VSIN has mentioned before, bettors should look to back Boston College at value prices when the Eagles are facing defenses vulnerable against the run. That allows BC to better control their own destiny with safe, conservative play.

Worth noting, though, that Saturday's win still showed limited margin for error. It's tough for the Eagles to "win big" without help. Boston College only won total yardage 431-380, losing yards-per-play 6.4 to 5.0. It took that cheap touchdown to cover the spread, and that turnover advantage plus 11 Rutgers penalties for 160 yards to keep the Scarlet Knights at bay.

It's very unlikely that upcoming ACC opponents will be as mistake-prone as lowly Rutgers. Up next, a home game Saturday vs. undefeated Wake Forest that will be nationally televised on the new ACC Network at 3:30 p.m. The Demon Deacons coasted past Elon this past Saturday 49-7 as 30-point favorites.

BC's late-season schedule may now be tougher than expected. Final opponent Pittsburgh (+10) shocked Central Florida 35-34 in an upset with national ramifications. The soft part of the 2019 slate is definitely over.

Finding betting value in NFL Futures

Glancing at Super Bowl and Offensive Rookie of the Year odds through three weeks.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Sharps are always on the lookout for value when it comes to in-season Futures odds, so today we'll highlight a few teams that are worth jumping on right now.

Good teams that are fresh off a Week 3 loss are worth taking fliers on to win the Super Bowl, as most everyone is down on the Titans, Eagles and Seahawks right now.

Here are the Super Bowl favorites right now at MetroBet.us/Sugar:

Patriots +350
Chiefs +550
Rams +800
Packers +1200
Cowboys +1300
Saints +1400

After that we immediately jump +600, with the Eagles sitting right at +2000. The Titans are a whopping +7000, and the Seahawks are sitting at +3300.

Excuses are like armpits — everyone has them and they all stink — but the Eagles were without their top two receivers on Sunday, and most of the mistakes they made in the loss to the Lions are correctable. There is also the lingering feeling that GM Howie Roseman will make a trade before the NFL deadline in late October, which should send the Eagles' Super Bowl odds back into the +1400 range.

As for the Titans' disaster of an outing last Thursday against Jacksonville, we'll chalk that up to a fluke. The meteor known as Gardner Minshew is currently in the Jeremy Lin zone and looks destined for a string of highly productive games. The Titans were simply caught in a bad spot — on the road, on a short week, and with Minshewmania in its infancy. The Tennessee defense still hasn't given up more than 20 points in a game and opponents are averaging just 17.3 points per game against them. Also, their offense will eventually at least be respectable, even if it means turning to backup QB Ryan Tannehill.

Finally, we get to the Seahawks, who lost by five points at home to the Saints on Sunday. Seattle is traditionally a streaky squad, and we only have to look back to last year to see that they can string together wins late in the season. After a 4-5 start in 2018, Russell Wilson and company ripped off victories in six of their last seven games.

The play: $5 on Eagles, $5 on Titans, $5 on Seahawks to win Super Bowl

Offensive Rookie of the Year

Giants QB Daniel Jones shot up the charts this week thanks to his scintillating debut performance against Tampa Bay, and is suddenly the favorite to win the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year award right now at MetroBet.us/Sugar at +200.

Here is a look at some other candidates.

Kyle Murray +350
Marquise Brown +600
Josh Jacobs +800
Gardner Minshew +800
David Montgomery +1200
Terry McLaurin +1600
DK Metcalf +2000
Miles Sanders +2500

The New York media will hype up Jones to no end moving forward, even if he starts to stumble these next few weeks — which is almost guaranteed for a rookie quarterback on a bad team. So Jones is the legitimate favorite here given that the media votes on the award.

Unlike the MVP award, you don't necessarily need to be on a good team to win Offensive Rookie of the Year as well.

Saquon Barkley won it last year playing for a 5-11 Giants team.

Working against Jones, though, is that for the majority of the history of this award, running backs get the nod. It's much easier for a running back to have immediate success in the NFL than it is for a QB. In fact, running backs have won the award in three of the past four years (Todd Gurley in 2015, Alvin Kamara in 2017 and Barkley last year).

Raiders running back Josh Jacobs has the best value here. The Alabama alum is currently eighth in the NFL in rushing with 228 yards through three games.

Aries Stick to the person who has been your rock through thick and thin. Offer your thoughts, concerns and plans, and work toward greater equality and shared dreams.

Taurus Put your situation in perspective. What's it going to cost and what's your best approach to getting what you want? Plan your actions instead of letting your emotions take the reins.

Gemini Don't mess with authority, rules or regulations. Trust only the facts and people who don't have ulterior motives. Take care of your health, wealth and emotional well-being.

Cancer Change requires physical energy, insight and flexibility. An opportunity will not live up to your expectations. Get the lowdown before you make a commitment.

Leo Look for adventure, excitement and interesting, informative people. Make choices based on what you want. Be a leader, not a follower. Alter only what needs to be updated.

Virgo A change of pace, surroundings or direction is favored. Expand your outlook, make new connections and learn all you can. Knowledge is power, and it will be instrumental in promoting personal growth.

Libra Change happens when you decide to act. Take the initiative to put an end to what no longer works for you. Stop the madness and begin to live life your way.

Scorpio Don't let your personal and professional lives collide. Keep your emotions, domestic situation and past secret. Remain focused on what you are trying to accomplish instead of trying to impress others.

Sagittarius Explore the possibilities, but don't count on something hypothetical. Gather the facts and look at the costs involved. Transparency is necessary if you want to avoid making a mistake.

Capricorn Don't give anyone access to your personal affairs, especially if intimidation is involved. Staying in control and handling matters yourself is advised. An adjustment at home will help ward off interference.

Aquarius Set your plans in motion and don't stop until you are satisfied with what you've accomplished. A relationship with someone innovative will lead to new opportunities.

Pisces Keep a watchful eye over what others do or how they respond to change. Align yourself with people who share your beliefs and goals. Positive support will encourage change and personal growth. EXCERPT
